APO/FPO/DPO Guidelines & Restrictions

Our troops work hard for us overseas. Far from home, few things brighten their days more than mail from friends and loved ones. Follow these guidelines so your letters and packages reach them intact, in the right place.

APO/FPO/DPO Addressing Tips

Mailing Restrictions

Use the service member's full name.
All mail must be addressed to someone specific; addressing mail to "Any Service Member" is no longer allowed.

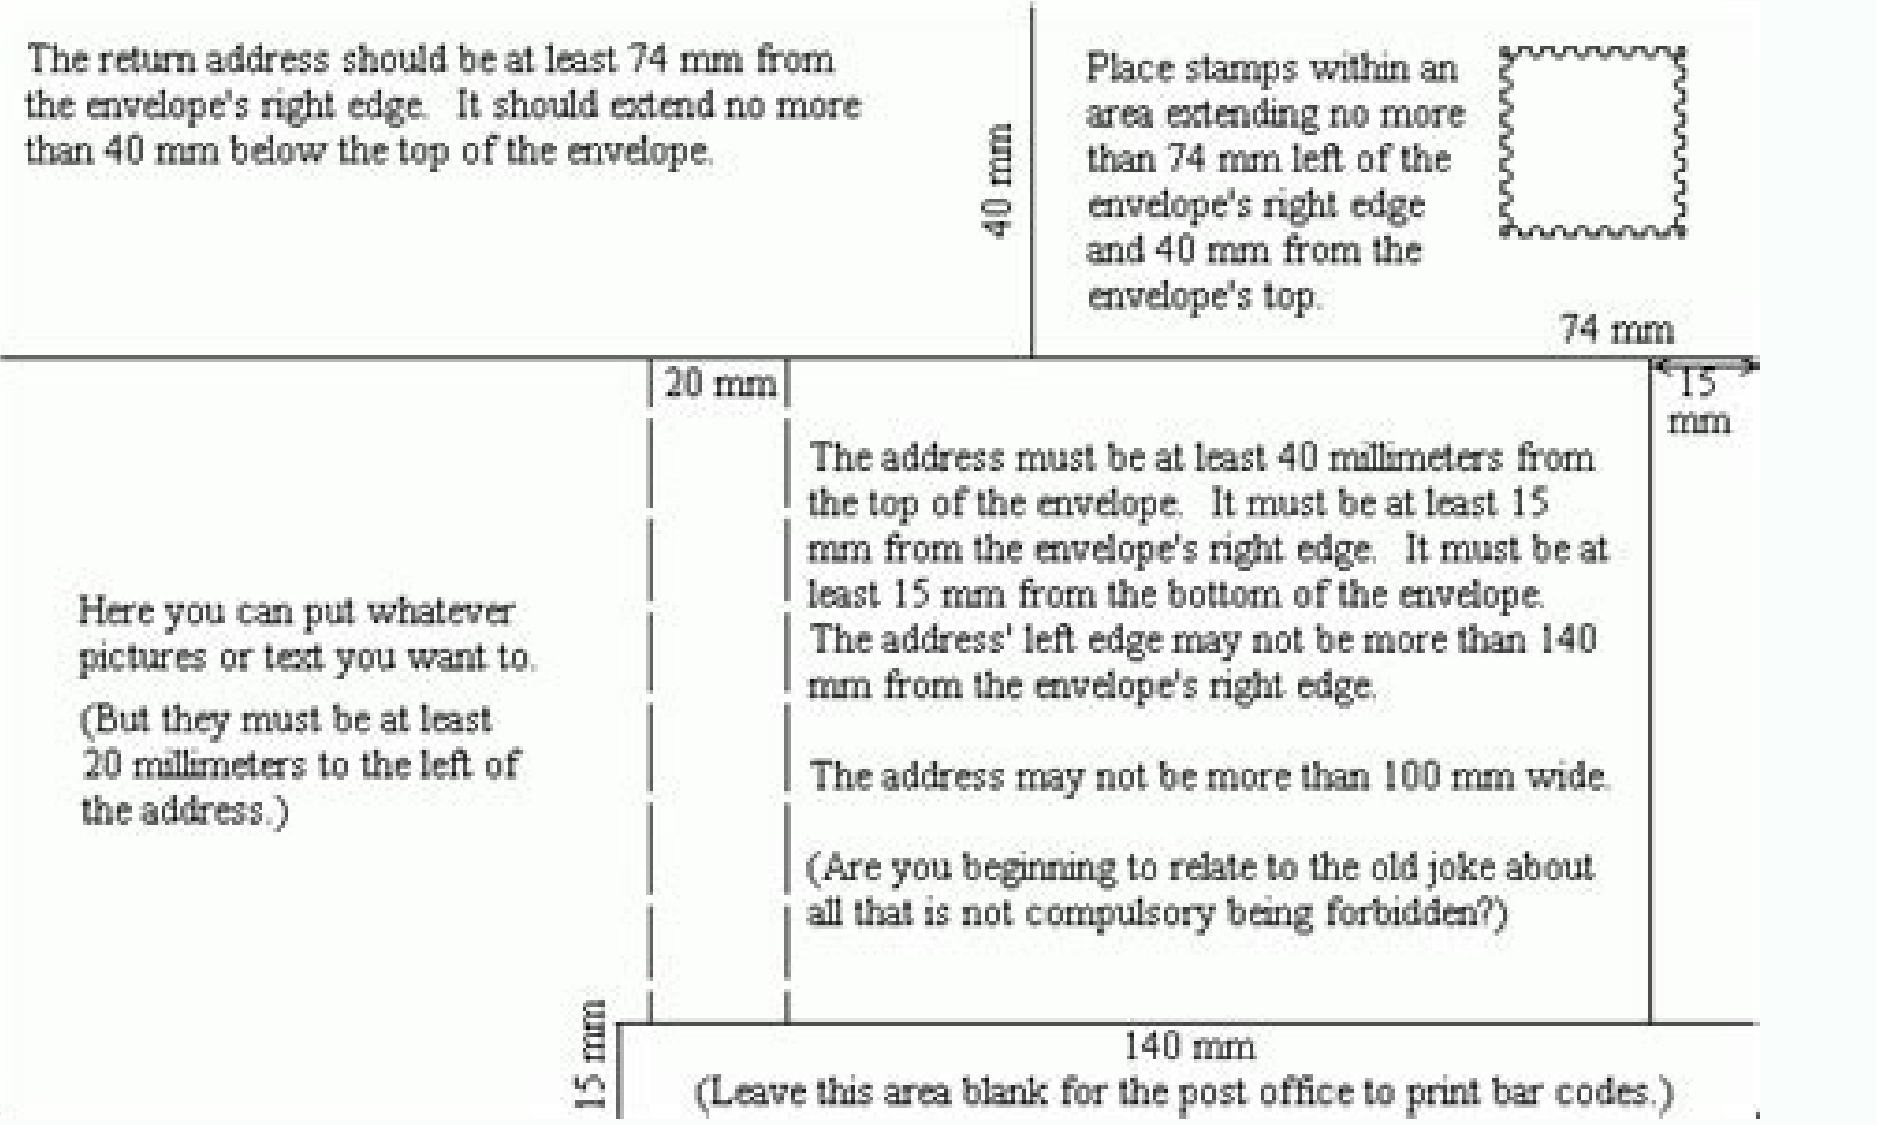

Include the unit and APO/FPO/DPO (Air/Army Post Office, Fleet Post Office, or Designated Post Office) address with the 9-digit ZIP Code™ (if one is assigned).

Address format for germany. International address format germany.

Your letters will only get delivered if you write the address correctly on the envelope. The location of the addresses and postage stamps on German letters are the same as in North America and the rest of Europe. The address of the recipient goes in the middle. The return address goes in the top left and the postage stamp in the top right. The section at the bottom must be left empty for the postal services. How to write the address on the envelope Simple example If you want to write to your friend Max Mustermann, this is how you would write his address on the envelope: Max Mustermann (the person you are writing to)Musterstraße 17 (street and door number)12345 Berlin (postal code and city)Deutschland If the name is not on the mailbox German apartments do not always have door numbers, so if the person's name is not on the mailbox, they will not receive your letter. You must include the name of the main tenant on the envelope. For example, if you want to send a letter to Max at his girlfriend's Monika's address, you must address the letter like this: Max Mustermann (the person you are writing to)/o Monika Schmidt (Monika has her name on the mailbox)Musterstraße 1712345 BerlinDeutschland If you sent a letter to Max's workplace, it would look like this: Max Mustermann (the person you are writing to)/o BigBusiness GmbH (Max works here)Bahnhofstraße 1A10115 BerlinDeutschland How to send letters by email If you live in Germany, the Deutsche Post lets you send post by email. It's a lot faster than going to the post office. You can also get a digital stamp with the Post & DHL app. You get a code to put on your envelope instead of a stamp. Use this map to find a mailbox. Article Menu Coronavirus Information & News Articles Menu Visit the FAQ section Business and Services Directory German addresses differ from those of some other countries with the house or building number being written after the street name. The post code (Postleitzahl - PLZ) is before the city or town name. All the post codes in Germany are five digits. Domestic mail When sending personal mail, the name normally is placed above the street name and number. Business and other mail will normally have the company name above the individual recipient's name (and sometimes their title or a specific department) directly below that. It is sometimes customary, but not necessary, to leave a space between the street and the line with the Post Code and city. For example a personal address may look like this: Name of Recipient Street name, number Post Code, City or Name of Recipient Street name, number Post Code, City So, a typical address on an envelope could read: Johannes Schmidt Mozartstr. 9 67677 Enkenbach or Johannes Schmidt Mozartstr. 9 67677 Enkenbach Str. is the German abbreviation for Strasse (Straße). It can indicate a street or road and is sometimes written as part of the street or road name and sometimes as a separate word - Mozartstr. or Mozart Strasse. International Mail addressed to Germany When addressing a letter or package from a country outside of Germany, the letter "D" is often used at the beginning of the line with the post code and city. "D" is the designated international postal system letter for Germany (Deutschland). For example: Johannes Schmidt Mozartstr. 9 D-67677 Enkenbach It is also acceptable to write the country name under the post code and city: Johannes Schmidt Mozartstr. 9 67677 Enkenbach Germany Other address designations for various types of streets, roads, paths, alleys etc. may include the following as part of the name. They are sometimes written as part of the street or road name and sometimes as a separate word - or Mozartallee or Mozart Allee for example. Allee (similar to Avenue or Boulevard) Gasse (similar to Alley or Lane, sometimes used to designate pedestrian zones) Weg (similar to Way or Path) Auf der ... (on the ... - sometimes used to designate a particular geographical area in a city or town) Site contents copyright © 2021 by Chuck Emerson Media Services Site design and maintenance by Gear Brand German postal services are provided by Deutsche Post, the former state owned monopoly that was privatised in 2000. There are post offices in nearly every town and city in Germany, over 13,000 in all, although they are disappearing in smaller villages. In general post offices open between 08:00 and 08:30 and close at 18:00. Smaller offices may close for lunch. Many post offices are also open on Saturday mornings, and main post offices are open for a limited number of hours on Sundays. Post office signs are yellow with a black horn. For information on Deutsch Post services Tel: 01802 3333 Website German Postal Codes Until reunification postal codes in Germany were four digits. In 1993 five digit postal codes (Postleitzahl - PLZ) were introduced. The first two digits indicate the area and the last three digits indicate the postal district. The postal regions are not divided up following the borders of the different Länder which can be confusing. To find a German address or postal code White Pages postal code finder Postal code finder (in German) To find a town name with a postal code, type in the postal code number in the Postleitzahl box and click on Suchen To find a postal code for a given town, type in the name in the Ort / Stadt box and click on Suchen German Addresses Addresses in Germany are written in a particular way: Line 1: Form of Address (optional) Line 2: Recipient Line 3: Street name followed by property/house number Line 4: Postal code followed by town name Line 5: Country (if outside Germany) For example: Herrn Dieter Wellhausen Langstraße 81 D-11179 Berlin As Germany is not the only country to use the five digit format it is often recommended to use the country code (D) before the numeric post code when writing addresses for international mail. [UP to International Mailing Address Formats Main Page] When mailing an envelope or postcard, leave at least the bottom 16 millimeters (5/8 inch) blank on both front and back. (The postal service's reading and sorting machines might need this space to print bar codes on your mail.) German Post Office (Deutsche Post) sample addresses: A normal address: Herrn ["to Mr." (form of address)] Eberhard Wellhausen [name] Wittekindshof [institution / company name] Schulstrasse 4 [street address] 32547 Bad Oyenhausen [postal code + city/town] The German Postal Service prefers that you no longer prefix the numeric postal code with the letter(s)-based country code. GERMANY [country] A PO Box ("Postfach") type of address: Firma ["company"] Wellhausen [company's name] Postfach 10 01 65 ["PO Box" + its number] 32547 Bad Oyenhausen [postal code + city/town] GERMANY [country] The Deutsche Post website has a lot of advice for making your mail machine-readable for speedy and accurate delivery, but I think much of it may be less important when mailing internationally. Some of this advice is translated and summarized in Addressing a Letter in Germany (English Language Instructions.) ABB Group ABB Flexible Automation GmbH [company name] Grüner Weg 6 [street address] 61169 Friedberg [postal code + city/town.] GERMANY [country] ABB Lackieranlagen GmbH [company name] Schorbachstrasse 9 [street address] Postfach 260 [PO Box number] This letter will probably be delivered to the post office box, because it occurs lower in the address. 35510 Butzbach [postal code + city/town.] GERMANY [country] Google ad(s) are sometimes shown above. Postal code lookup information, for German and English speakers. This form lets you find a German address's postal code (German equivalent of a U.S. zip code.) Exeter Beginners' German textbook on the WWW "Addresses and postcodes" partly explains German address format, but for more information you should also read "German letter layout," which gives more address formatting details. Addressing a Letter in Germany (English Language Instructions) shows the unintentional humor and pathos of addressing a letter in a machine-processing age. Postage calculators and tables showing how much postage you need to mail or ship to and/or from Germany are at the International Postal Rates Page. "...how much postage to Germany?" "Instructions for addressing mail to Germany." "Instructions for addressing packages to Germany." "How to send mail to Germany." etc. According to Deutsche Post, a domestic mail address in Germany consists at least of [name] [street name and number] [postal code] [place of destination] For example: Erich Müller Goethestr. 13 22767 Hamburg However, it is customary to add the form of address in the accusative case. (In Switzerland, the form "Herr" is considered permissible.) Herrn Erich Müller Goethestr. 13 22767 Hamburg (Note that, since 1 September 1999, Deutsche Post prefers that you no longer prefix the numeric postal code with any country code, for example neither "DE-22767 Hamburg" nor "D-22767 Hamburg".) For international mail, according to the Universal Postal Union (UPU), the name of the place of destination and the name of the country of destination shall be written in capital letters. Herrn Erich Müller Goethestr. 13 22767 HAMBURG GERMANY According to the UPU, the name of the country of destination shall be written preferably in the language of the country of origin. To avoid any difficulty in the countries of transit, it is desirable for the name of the country of destination to be added in English or another internationally known language. (Note that actually French is the official language of the UPU. English was added as a working language in 1994.) For example, the address of a letter posted in Poland to Germany contains the name of the destination country in Polish and English (or another internationally known language): Herrn Erich Müller Goethestr. 13 22767 HAMBURG NIEMCY - GERMANY
